

William Stout McQuary

Follow William Stout McQuary as he leaves Virginia to seek new land for a new start in life, first in the foothills of Kentucky where he found good land for horses, but not cotton, and next in Mississippi, due to financial difficulties, as a sharecropper. In 1845 Texas joined the Union, and members of the wagon train followed the Gone to Texas migration seeking a new start in the new state. The train crossed the Mississippi, followed old Indian trails and Spanish roads, and came to rest beyond the Brazos in Milam County along Little River. The pioneers settled down to farming and community life and to rear their children. Even with interruptions by the Civil War and family difficulties life was good, but William Stout McQuary wanted to begin anew on new land. He found it in Lilac, Milam County, where he also found a church home and good neighbors. As an old man he reflects on his accomplishments and realizes he finally is near the end of the long journey that took him from Virginia to Lilac, Texas.
