

The Political Primer (Classic Reprint)

WHEN a young man of birth and fortune takes leave of the University, and sets out in the career of life, he should ask himself these questions: - Have I ambition? or taste, and talent? or a love of military reputation? or the patience and good-humour of a well-meaning country magistrate? or am I fit for nothing but to be a patron of prize-fighters, a saunterer, or a dandy? To those who feel that they possess ambition, the following pages are addressed: their object is to place before the view of aspiring and inexperienced minds, the road to public honours in a nation like Great Britain.
